! - Man City v United Anyone else excited for tomorrow night? I am really looking forward to United v Man City tomorrow night and I'm a bit worried that if I were to put my bet on immediately it would be wrong. We have two very good teams with contrasting styles of play and I have a very poor record when choosing between 2 teams with similar records. I like to think I've got my finger on the pulse a bit more than what most people do and though Man City have been far from perfect of late the rise of the side has been very satisfying to watch, while United have improved at a terrific pace after a dreadful start but I have just seen 7 very long draws in succession. I'm currently very hard on United as I think they're going to struggle at The Bridge and feel that I have to go with City to avoid being the Titanic (or Beeching as the case may be). However, despite my concerns about the absolute quality of the two teams I have chosen to place my bet on at 10-1 (very unlikely), I have got a glimmer of hope - largely because I'm very involved with Chelsea v Liverpool on the same night and Liverpool are doing very well at the moment so I think that I'm going to need to come up with a plan to get in behind Liverpool's lead which will allow me to still make a profit should Man City hit the ground running tomorrow. I can't see what Liverpool are doing up front at the moment and they seem to be lacking in quality as they continue to finish seventh. However, I do have a plan B. I need to get at least a draw if Liverpool do come out on top but I'm a big believer in a lot of QPR's success is based on youth development. We've always had quality players but we've lacked a youthful drive, the sort of drive that forces managers and players alike to be a bit more tactical and physical, more committed to getting the ball back more often than trying to attack to death. I'm looking towards the youngsters now. This wasn't a problem when Joey Barton or Bentley were with us and this was more of a problem when there was someone like Joe Cole or Heskey up front as you just didn't have anyone on the pitch that could just put the ball in the back of the net (and believe me, I have been the man sorely

Website/Game/Creator: Ikarus is a game-making tool inspired by the concept of The Sims. While The Sims is a simple game it has a massive community, and this lead many people to think this is just a rip-off of the original concept. While I agree that this game does rip-off the original Sims concept, I find that it has many unique and interesting features which make it a stand-out game. I like to think that the game-making tool is something which is completely new, and we've been able to keep it fun and quick while being feature-complete. If you're looking for something to make, or are just curious about how we are doing things you can check out our website where you will find the Ikarus Modding Kit. If you have any questions and suggestions you can always contact us on our Discord server. About This Game Much like the shooter genre, the popularization of loot boxes (aka loot crates) has contributed to the decline of the video game industry. Debris was a game which was born during the GoldSrc era but came to life in the Fortnite era. It was a game completely different from most of the games that came before it, mainly because it focused on the small details of community interaction. Debris survived largely thanks to its unique community, but even so, the developers are very much aware of the challenges that came with remaining afloat during a period of game-over. The studio is planning to release a major update for Debris soon. But even so, the community can take part and help shape it. Debris v1.0 supports cross-platform play between PC and PS4. Steam Features • Collect crates and boxes • Catch loot • Play with opponents using skirmish mode • A library with more than 20 tutorials and guides to make this game more fun • A friends list to see what other players are up to and share items • A gallery where you can share your gameplay or items •
