These digital athletes are able to use the same skills they employ during real-life games, such as the ability to jump and run. They make running and jumping feel more natural and fluid - allowing them to confidently control the ball when on the move. A combination of real and digital athletes allows for players to perform at a level closer to real life than ever before, giving fans the opportunity to excel in their favorite game modes. The new skill animations from HyperMotion Technology are based on how these athletes move in real-life, allowing them to perform their on-pitch action with intensity and emotion. Experienced real-life athletes are also assisting in creating the game's new goal celebrations: the Juventus team in the game features Gianluigi Buffon, Gianluigi Buffon? and Paolo Maldini. "FIFA is a collective dream and a personal passion," said David Rutter, Executive Producer at EA Sports. "We are so thrilled to have full access to real players and our new in-game training systems to refine the game's details and mechanics. This is the most authentic and complete football experience on any console and we are confident players will love it." Current-generation consoles will gain access to the game's online-only My Career mode, which allows players to build their own path through the heights of the professional game. Players now have the ability to follow players' life stories as well as see video on the player's career and training from Real Sports. In addition, players will now be able to use motion and audio cues when passing and shooting the ball to add detail to the game's new play style. FIFA 22 will also feature expanded gameplay on pitch using Create a Player. In this mode, players will be able to select their size, position and style of play, meaning even novice FIFA players will be able to bring their game to life using this new tool. In addition, FIFA 22 will enable players to replicate their best moves in My Legacy, My Style and My Player Style modes. "It is a testament to the work of our developers and an opportunity for all of us to be able to create the most authentic experience of football on any console," said Aaron McHardy, Creative Director at EA Sports. "Through the use of real data from real athletes, we have created completely new and unrehearsed on-p
